

Why Join The ASBB?

The Australasian Society of Building Biologists (ASBB) has been educating and assisting the public, business, health practitioners and the government about issues related to the built environment since it's inception in 2007.

An important role of the ASBB is to provide the public with peace of mind that when they see our logo on a practitioner members site or printed material, that they can be assured of a level of professionalism, recency of knowledge and current best practice.

As a professional body our structure supports our members from students right through to experienced practitioners.

Here are some of the benefits of membership:
